Finnegan Henderson Farabow Garrett & Dunner's Motion to Withdraw as Counsel for Winston Williams is moot. The sole basis for Finnegan's request was that it had lost contact with Williams and could no longer represent him effectively. On January 5, 2008, however, Plaintiffs received a declaration from Williams, as well as Pacific Northwest Software, on pleading paper from the Finnegan firm. Williams executed his declaration on January 2, 2008 – the day Plaintiffs' opposition to the present motion was due. It appears that the Finnegan firm is communicating with Williams.

Williams' declaration, which Plaintiffs received on January 5, 2008, was the first that Plaintiffs' counsel knew that the Finnegan firm was once again in contact with Williams. The Finnegan firm had numerous opportunities to advise Plaintiffs of this possibility prior to their response brief being due. Specifically, Plaintiffs' counsel and the Finnegan firm communicated several times, including once by telephone, over the preceding two weeks. Finnegan never advised Plaintiffs that it had located and communicated with Williams.

Defendants' failure to advise Plaintiffs of the recent contact caused needless work and expenditures. Plaintiffs were required to engage resources during a lightly staffed holiday period to prepare an opposition memorandum based upon facts that defendants had presented but knew had become untrue. To that end, absent Court guidance, Plaintiffs will separately file a motion seeking its costs and fees associated with its responsive papers.

Because counsel for Williams has now resumed contact with its client, Facebook believes the current Motion to Withdraw is moot.

Plaintiffs have attached copies of the declarations, which do not appear to comply with the Court's December 12, 2007, Order compelling further responses to Plaintiffs' interrogatories.

Plaintiffs will file a separate motion concerning these declarations.
